MAP Hythe Wexshaw

This small community was built upon the shores of a small lake called Ulbewater and supported the generations of families who have occupied Colterstone Hold. But just as the estate itself was abandoned and eventually consumed by plants, so too was Hythe Wexshaw. Eventually, the family's money evaporated, and the lands fell into ruin. Those who lived in Hythe Wexshaw depended on the hold for their livelihood, so they departed when the hold's fortunes changed. Now, overabundant plant life — some of it quite dangerous — is slowly devouring the village.

05:01 A. Diver Workshop

At one point in the distant past, Ulbewater was known for its freshwater pearls. This building served as a launching point for small boats that carried pearl harvesters across the water to their favorite dive spots. Several dinghies and longboats are dry-docked here, along with seemingly endless portage of rope. If the characters lack any type of gear associated with small watercraft, they can find it here. The building has several rooms, some used as offices, but most given to the process of slugging mollusks, preparing them to feed the residents of the hold, and caring for any pearls. A thorough search is difficult, as it involves cutting away layers of tough weeds grown up through the floorboards, but persistence and a DC 16 Perception check turns up 1 pearl per turn of exploration. Each pearl is worth 25 gp. A total of 4 may be discovered.

- PARCEL: Diver Workshop

An overturned rowboat with a hull painted a faded blue is on the lakeshore near the workshop. Though it's covered in the white droppings of waterfowl and partially concealed by weeds, the boat is obviously of fine construction, as its hull has no visible damage from the elements. On the damp rocks beneath the boat is an intricate crystalline stone. If physically inspected, this crystalline horror attacks.
